IN BRIEF

The worn stone steps up from a secluded courtyard to a small terrace and view sets a charming tone to this pretty property that is open plan inside. The current owner has completed the majority of the heavy work including a neat, beamed ceiling with countersunk spotlights and a traditional chestnut 'Périgordine' floor downstairs, pointed stone walls, electricity and plumbing ready for further appliances, bathrooms etc, leaving an open choice of finishing and priced accordingly. The upstairs loft space has sanitary evacuation installed, neat wooden flooring as well as being well insulated between the roof trusses. The cottage is part of a medieval village dominated by its castle, and steeped in history with restaurant and local shop within easy walking distance. An affordable gem.
