NOTES

DESCRIPTION

Tucked away from prying eyes, nestled in unspoilt, leafy surroundings, this characterful property captivates from the very first moment with its authenticity and unique atmosphere.

Behind its façades, imbued with old-world charm and enhanced by lush vegetation – old-fashioned rose bushes, flowering hydrangeas and carefully landscaped flowerbeds – lies a house where time seems to stand still.

The eye is immediately drawn to its unusual architecture, particularly its slender, dove-cote-style roof, a truly rare aesthetic feature that lends the whole property a unique charm.

Inside, natural light floods generously into the living spaces through large windows opening onto the garden. A glass-walled room creates a constant connection between indoors and outdoors, inviting a sense of tranquillity and contemplation.

The garden, a veritable haven of greenery, offers various intimate living spaces, ideal for enjoying fine weather, entertaining guests or simply savouring the tranquillity of the surroundings.

This exceptionally beautiful 16th-century townhouse, once owned by the Marquise de Pompadour, will charm you with its unique character and historic charm.

The entrance features a porch for parking your car. The main house comprises an entrance hall with a staircase, a separate fitted kitchen and a living room. Upstairs, there is a large master suite with its own boudoir area and two further bedrooms.

The second floor features a library, a bedroom with its own shower room and a convertible attic.

Outbuildings: an 85 m² barn, featuring attractive glass roofs, a self-contained studio with a shower room.
