IN BRIEF

Charming Village Property with Renovation Potential and Gîte Opportunity – Châtignac, Charente

Located in the heart of the peaceful village of Châtignac in the Charente countryside, this characterful three-bedroom home comes with a second building offering potential for a two-bedroom gîte – ideal for guest accommodation, a holiday rental project, or multigenerational living. Both properties are in need of renovation, making this a perfect opportunity for buyers seeking a project with character and long-term value.

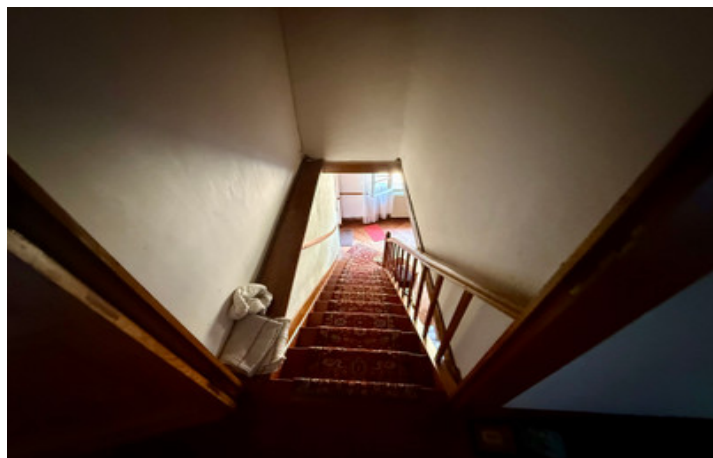

Set in gently rolling landscapes of vineyards, farmland and woodland, the property benefits from a calm rural setting while remaining close to essential amenities. The vibrant market town of Chalais is just 10 minutes south, offering supermarkets, restaurants, banks and its well-known Monday market. The lively commercial town of Barbezieux-Saint-Hilaire is 20 minutes north-west, providing a wide range of shops, services and schools.

Basic Facts & Geography

Châtignac is a small rural commune in the Charente department, in southwestern France.

Elevation varies between 71 m and 190 m, giving a somewhat hilly / rolling-countryside feel.

The area is classified as rural with a "very dispersed habitat" — i.e. houses and farms scattered rather than a dense village centre.

Châtignac is a small, quiet rural village, set in gently undulating countryside typical of south-Charente: modest size, low density, and calm rural character.

Environment, Nature & Local Landscape

The terrain around Châtignac is somewhat hilly, with the altitude variations mentioned — this gives the area a rolling-landscape character rather than flat plains.

The soils in the area are conducive to agriculture: according to local agricultural data, there are arable lands and vineyards (the region belongs to the general wine / cognac-producing area) — viticulture is part of the local agriculture.

The region's climate is temperate oceanic (mild winters, moderate summers) — generally typical for the...
