IN BRIEF

A pretty farmhouse that is at least 18th century, possibly 17th, with outbuildings including a large period stone barn and a meadow, enough for a pony, much of which remains little changed in outline from the cadastre map of 1826. The older part of the house is roofed in hand cut thick Corrèze slate and the loft is dry and clear. The house interiorly needs stripping back to the original stone, to reveal what must be a monumental fireplace hidden beneath 20th century tiling as well as other covered period features of previous centuries. A superb project for those who love architectural history!
