DESCRIPTION

Nestled in the peaceful countryside in the village of Fontenay-sur-Mer, just minutes from the beaches of the Normandy coast and historic sites linked to Normandy Landings, this extraordinary property offers a rare blend of heritage, scale, and versatility.

Extending to approximately 440 m² of living space, the estate is set within 4,500 m² (over one acre) of beautifully structured grounds, with two separate entrances allowing for privacy, multi-generational living, or independent rental use.

A Property Steeped in History

Known as Angletot, the property originates from the medieval abbey of Nanteuil and later became part of the ecclesiastical domain of Saint-Marcouf. Its name reflects its historic role as a tithe collection site.

At its heart stands a remarkable 13th–14th century chapel, still integrated within the main residence. Exceptionally, traces of original frescoes remain visible, alongside architectural features such as historic windows and remnants of an external staircase. The property is recorded in ecclesiastical archives dating back to 1330, making it a truly significant heritage asset.

Over centuries, the estate evolved to accommodate a wealthy abbot, with additions including monk cells, bakery, cookhouse, and a 14th-century well. The current façade reflects elegant 18th-century styling.
