DESCRIPTION

Characterful Normandy Stone House Near Utah Beach

Set in a peaceful hamlet in the Normandy bocage, just minutes from the historic coastline of Utah Beach and the famous village of Sainte-Mère-Église, this attractive detached stone house offers approximately 125 m² of accommodation and an annexe of 25 m² with its own shower and W.C. A wealth of original character and considerable flexibility for family living, a second home or a property with further potential.

Around three hours from Paris, with direct trains from Carentan at 15 mins, the property occupies a tranquil rural setting and not directly overlooked, while remaining within easy reach of the beaches, villages, shops and services of the Manche countryside.

A House Full of Normandy Character

The property retains many of the features that make traditional Normandy houses so appealing, including exposed stone walls, substantial timber beams, terracotta floor tiles and exposed roof timbers.

At the heart of the house is an impressive 53 m² living and dining open kitchen, providing a generous space for family life and entertaining. The open-plan fitted kitchen forms part of this welcoming room, while the combination of stone, timber and traditional tiled flooring creates a wonderfully authentic atmosphere.

A Tulikivi masonry stove provides an attractive focal point as well as efficient and economical heating, complementing the character of the property.

The ground floor also benefits from an annexe with shower room and W.C., providing useful additional space and convenient access towards the garden.
