DESCRIPTION

The neighbourhood's other attractions lie in the intimate 'village-like' atmosphere of this street, which is on a human scale and less busy than the neighbouring main roads. The area benefits from a lively and convenient environment, home to numerous architectural practices, innovative companies, workshops, cultural venues and fine dining establishments. The building itself is home to several creative businesses, including an architectural practice. The Grands Boulevards, Le Sentier, Montorgueil and the 9th arrondissement are all within easy walking distance. The area's reputation has improved considerably over the last twenty years. In this characterful period building with excellent transport links, a well-renovated flat is therefore likely to enjoy sustained demand, both as a main residence and as a second home, with good potential for resale and long-term capital appreciation.
